

Search Engines and Directories

Search Engine-allows you to search a database of Web sites and files. Examples: Alta Vista, Google, Bing

Search directories – allows you to search a directory of sites that have been registered by the site owners. Example: Yahoo

Meta-search engine-searches other search engines. Examples: Metacrawler and Ask Jeeves.

A good searching strategy is the key to successfully finding the information you need.

Searching tips

- Become familiar with more than one search engine or directory. Understand how it compiles its data
- Be as specific as possible in search term. Try to find unique words or phrases. i.e. the rock band Live might display thousands of unrelated words, and even typing in Live music or Live band would be massive. More specific would be to use band members names, hometown (York, PA) record label, song names.
- Use a niche portal to start your search. i.e. the Ultimate Band List (www.ubl.com) would only search for musical groups with the name Live.
- Use Boolean operators in a meaningful manner (and, or, not, etc.)
- Pay attention to dates and source information on sites. More to come on this issue.
- Don't give up easily. The information is out there, you just have to find it. Exercise:

You will be assigned one of the following pieces of information for which to search. Take 10 minutes to search the Web, making notes about your searching strategy, sites visited, successes or failures, challenges. Each person will describe to class their strategy and the information they found.
